(57) Abstract :

ABSTRACT "Innovative Gastro-Retentive Microspheres for Enhanced Nateglinide Delivery in Diabetes Management" The present invention discloses novel gastro-retentive hollow microspheres designed for the controlled release of Nateglinide, a widely used antidiabetic drug, to enhance its therapeutic efficacy in managing diabetes mellitus in patients. The microspheres are formulated using biocompatible polymers and fabricated through an emulsion solvent evaporation technique, resulting in hollow structures that exhibit buoyant properties, ensuring prolonged gastric retention. The optimized formulation demonstrates excellent encapsulation efficiency, allowing for a sustained and controlled release of Nateglinide over an extended period. In vitro dissolution studies reveal a significant improvement in the drug release profile, with a steady release of Nateglinide observed for more than 8 hours, which is crucial for maintaining stable blood glucose levels. The developed gastro-retentive hollow microspheres provide a promising strategy for improving the bioavailability of Nateglinide and enhancing patient compliance by reducing the frequency of administration, thereby offering a more effective approach to diabetes management in patients. (57) Abstract :

Herbal medicine is established on plants and contains natural chemical substances that promote health and curative properties for illness and diseases. Medicinal herb plays an important role in the treatment of cancer. The objective of the present study was to assess the potential cytotoxic activity of seed extracts from Sesbania grandiflora, which showed anticancer activity in vitro against a variety of human cancer cell lines, including MIA PA CA 2 (a cell line associated with pancreatic cancer) and THP-1 (a cell line associated with acute leukemia). The MTT technique was used to test the Sesbania grandiflora seed extract's potential anticancer activities. The activity was carried out at various concentrations of the extract, ranging from 50 to 200 µg/ml. According to the findings, the 50% inhibitory concentration (IC50) of Sesbania grandiflora seed extract has a strong cytotoxic ability against human pancreatic cancer cells (IC50 = 342 µg/ml) and human acute leukemia cells (IC50 = 196 µg/ml). While increasing the concentration of extracts reduced cell viability. The extract of Sesbania grandiflora reduced cell viability and induced apoptosis in Human pancreatic cancer (MIA PA CA 2) and the Human acute leukemia (THP-1) cell lines. These in vitro results have shown that Sesbania grandiflora possesses beneficial effects on human cell lines.

Abstract: Infections are one of the major reasons for mortality. They cause one fourth of the deaths throughout the world and half of the deaths in developing countries. Since most of the current antibiotics got resistance towards the pathogens, the need for the development of novel antimicrobial agents became a vital task in the medicinal chemistry research. Current study focused on the synthesis and antimicrobial activity evaluation of the novel imidazole derivatives. The synthesis involves a simple one pot reaction between the aryl aldehyde, propane-1,2,3-triamine in the presence of NaI and aq 30% H₂O₂. The products were purified by column chromatography on silica gel using EtOAc–Hexane (10:1) as eluent. All the synthesized compounds were analysed by IR, NMR and Mass Spectral studies. The designed synthetic scheme delivered the targeted imidazoline amine hybrids in good yields. Analytical characterization with spectral techniques confirmed the structure of the synthesized compounds. Antimicrobial assay employed two gram-positive bacteria: S. aureus and B. subtilis; two gram-negative bacteria: P. aeruginosa, E. coli and two fungal strains - Aspergillus niger and Candida albicans. The agar plate disk diffusion method was used for the antimicrobial assay. The results reveal that all the compounds demonstrated potent antibacterial, antifungal properties especially the compounds 3d and 3e are more potent among the tested compounds.

1. Introduction

Microbial infections and antimicrobial agents

Infections are one of the major reasons for mortality. They cause one fourth of the deaths throughout the world and half of the deaths in developing countries. Majority of the infants' deaths are because of infections only. Among the infectious diseases, majority of them are related to vital systems and organs of the body like respiratory tract. Because of the improper usage of antimicrobial agents, most of the developed countries have got resistance to the currently available antimicrobial agents. Majority of the infections caused by Streptococcus pneumonia, Haemophilus influenzae, and Movaxella catarrhalis, have got resistance to few antibiotic classes. S. pneumoniae which causes respiratory infections developed resistance most of the antibiotics. Because of these resistance, it is very difficult estimate the exact treatment outcomes by using antimicrobial agents.

There are several categories of antibiotics currently in the market to kill bacteria which are depicted in the Figure 1.1. Antibiotics that act on the cell wall synthesis, nucleic acid synthesis and protein synthesis are the major class of antibiotics.

Abstract: This study investigates the neuroprotective and antioxidant potential of the ethanolic extract of allium sativum in a rat model of Alzheimers disease induced by $AlCl_3$. The research highlights the significant impact of the allium extract in migrating the effects of Alzheimers, providing a promising avenue for further exploration in the treatment of neurodegenerative diseases.

Keywords: Allium sativum, extraction. DTNB, Anova, GSH

1. Introduction

Alzheimers disease is the one of the neurodegenerative diseases characterized by the loss of neurons and amnesia, intellectual ability. Oxidative stress is one of the reasons for Alzheimer's disease. In the present study Neuroprotective Potential of A. sativum on $AlCl_3$ induced neurotoxicity in rat. Al is reported as a potent neurotoxin and has been associated with AD since exacerbates brain oxidative injury, causes neuronal inflammation, and induces $A\beta$ deposition, which leads to impairment in working memory (Hanna R et al., 2020). So $A\beta$ deposition it shown selective potent neurotoxic property, it promotes the inflammatory process and fibrillary aggregation (Pike et al., 1995). In this investigation, we induced the Alzheimer's in rats by injection of $AlCl_3$, which is suitable model for AD (Atsumi et al., 1994).

Survey of literature revealed that Allium sativum traditionally used in treatment of constipation, cramps, colic, cough, bronchitis, cold. It has been screened for pharmacological activities such as antimicrobial, antioxidant, anti-inflammatory, anxiolytic further it has not screened for Alzheimer's activity. So the aim of present work was to investigate the potential pharmacological & Neuroprotective effects of Allium sativum on $AlCl_3$ induced Alzheimer's disease in rat.

In biochemical estimations, we found the decreased levels of MDA and AChE and increase in glutathione levels in both extracts. In DPPH radical scavenging activity of ethanolic extracts showed significant % inhibition of free radicals. It shows that ethanolic extract were having significant antioxidant activity. So finally ethanolic extract of Allium sativum on AD in rats it shows neuro-protective effect by increasing the hippocampal memory in anti-oxidant activity in biochemical parameters.

2. Materials and Methods

Bulb Material and Extraction:

The peel of Allium sativum were collected from super market, Hyderabad, Telangana, India, during month of march. The collected bulb were shade dried, powdered and extracted with Ethanol by maceration.

Procedure for Extraction of Allium Sativum

Preparation of Ethanolic extract of A. sativum bulb The raw Allium sativum was slice, dried in air and then pulverized to powder. The extraction was performed by soaking 100g of the pulverized garlic in 600ml of distilled water for 24 hours. The residue and filtrate were obtained by filtering the soaked garlic (Allium sativum) using Whatman No.1 filter paper the residue was dried on a cardboard paper and the filtrate was obtained as extract.

Fractionation of Extract:

Dried extract of bulb of Allium sativum was taken and treated with ethanol and separated using a separating funnel. The ethanol fractions are collected.

Animals:

Wistar rats (male) are procured from Mahaveer agencies, Ghatkesar, Hyderabad. Animals weighing 150-200 gm at the age of 12-21 weeks and the animals were kept under standard conditions maintained at $25 \pm 3^\circ C$; 35-60% humidity, 12 hr dark light/ dark cycle & standard pellet diet and drinking water ad libitum. The animals were acclimatized to the laboratory conditions for experiment.

Grouping and Induction of Neurotoxicity:

Animals were divided into four groups, each containing six rats.

(37) Abstract :

Abstract: In this present invention, mesoporous silica nanoparticle loaded with Anticoplastic drug had been prepared through emulsification followed with solvent evaporation method can be used via: different route of administration. Through this method mesoporous silica nanoparticle were prepared with optimized dependent and independent variables. Different formulations were prepared with varying ratio of drug and polymers which effects drug release and kinetics of drug release pattern. The entrapment of drug causes sustained drug release from mesoporous silica nanoparticle system. The research aims to study the drug release from mesoporous silica nanoparticle and its mechanism of release which ensures controlled and effective drug release. The formulation prepared were evaluated for drug entrapment, in-vitro drug release, drug release kinetics study, SEM (particle size determination), stability testing and In vitro MCF-7 cell line studies. The percentage drug entrapment for all the formulations was appropriate with formulation F1 giving the highest entrapment up to 66.43%. The formulation F2 and F3 62.95% and 54.72% drug entrapment respectively. The cumulative drug release for the formulation F1, F2 and F3 was found to be 90.62%, 79.61% and 76.25% respectively, individually about a span 8 hours are required or controlled drug delivery model for the formulation. The maximum cumulative percentage drug release was shown by F1. The % tumor growth inhibition of formulation F1, F2 and F3 was found to be 32.64%, 28.42% and 21.24% respectively. The pure drug showed 18.2 % tumor growth inhibition. The formulation comprises the extremesurfactant proportion and the minor particle size (200nm-500nm) and it shows the maximum release initially. The formulations were found to be stable which gives controlled drug delivery for 6 hours. The formulation has nanoparticle size range around 200-500nm.

ABOUT PROGRAM

Chromatography is a separation method where the analyte is combined within a liquid or gaseous mobile phase, which is pumped through a stationary phase. Usually one phase is hydrophilic and the other is lipophilic. The components of the analyte interact differently with these two phases. Depending on their polarity they spend more or less time interacting with the stationary phase and are thus retarded to a greater or lesser extent.

ABOUT PROGRAM

Social relationships are known to affect health and survival to an extent comparable with smoking. Women and men differ in the number and size of different types of social relationships and in the health impacts. Several health-related behaviors are likely to mediate this link for some but not all aspects of a person's social context. Diet is a strong candidate for systematic examination along the pathway between social relationships and health so as to better inform chronic disease prevention and promotion of healthy ageing.
